

Toilet shock for tourist awed by clean and green Singapore

---

I AM a South African who was in Singapore last week for a one-week stay. On my way to my hotel, I was struck by the beauty of your garden city.

Over the week, I enjoyed the courtesy of polite citizens and the varied and tasty fare in foodcourts.

But I would like to highlight one concern - the state of toilets in foodcourts. I was shocked to find many of them dirty during my walk around the city. They were worse than toilets in South African coffee shops.

I hope the authorities will enforce better hygiene standards.

Trevor Mulaudzi