

PROTECT TOILET CLEANERS' MODESTY

 IT IS not unusual to find female cleaners turning up unannounced in busy men's toilets to clean them or to re-fill soap dispensers.

This happened to me several times in shopping centres and I found it embarrassing.

I can understand how these cleaners feel, having to compromise their self-respect – and even modesty – to work in male toilets to eke out a living.

It would be good if cleaning contractors assigned female cleaners only to women's toilets.

However, if they need to work in men's toilets, then no one should be allowed to use the toilet while they are carrying out their duties.
