

Train station loos should stay open longer

DO TRAIN station restrooms operate only during certain hours? It was about 11.20pm where I reached Boon Lay MRT station, and I needed to use the restroom.

As Jurong Point was closed, my nearest option was the public toilets in the MRT station.

To my surprise, an employee there refused to let me use the toilet.

Before this, I did not know there were operating hours in public toilets in MRT stations. Perhaps these should be displayed on a sign.

Even if there are operating hours, should the public toilets not be made available to commuters until the last bus? Also, in a spirit of graciousness, should the cleaner not allow someone to use the toilet for a few minutes, rather than turn her away?

Lam Sook Ching (Ms)