

Taps, toilet flushes to bear efficiency labels from July

THE decades-long “save water” calls finally seem to be sinking in.

From July, taps and toilet flushes sold here must bear labels stating how water-efficient they are.

Also from July, water appliances installed in new and renovated homes will have to have at least a “one-tick” water-efficiency rating.

Similar rules for energy efficiency already apply to electrical appliances sold here.

The Ministry of the Environment and Water Resources said yesterday it will keep its eye on the ball for water conservation through public education.
